

Catherine Kaulfuss

C.Kaulfuss@igs.uib.no

Catherine Kaulfuss is a PhD candidate at the Centre for International Health at the University of Bergen. She is a member of the research cluster child health and nutrition and currently works on a thesis on growth velocity patterns in children under five in Central Africa. She is responsible for the core course in epidemiology held at the Centre for International Health and in addition teaches at the Medical Faculty in the areas anthropometry, general and nutritional epidemiology and research tools and methods. She has a background in Sports Science and was formerly involved in research projects on anthropometry of overweight and obese children.